MISCONCEPTIONS

Misconceptions of identity, time, place, form and event hang a thetan up. The only reason why a cluster hangs together is such misconception.

A thetan can have a misconception of time, by having a wrong date for an incident. Or he can conceive that a past picture is "now". Or he can have two incidents switched in time, and think the earlier incident is later, and think the later incident is earlier. Such a misconception of time hangs it up and prevents a blow. And you can get a blow by straightening out the time misconception.

A misconception of place occurs when a thetan thinks something happened in location A, when it happened in location B. You can get a misconception of both time and place. E.g. a cluster gets a recent heavy restimulation. They think the incident was the restim, they made a picture of the restim and think that's where it occurred originally - think the cluster was formed at the time and place of the restimulation. So they have both the time and place in error. This misconception of both time and place confuses them and hangs the cluster up.

Misconception of identity. Thetan X thinks he was implanted in "Woof" (place) - but actually he's copying the picture of somebody who was implanted in "Woof". He hangs up on the misconception of identity (thinks he's the other thetan), and misconception of event (thinks he was implanted when he wasn't).

The whole reason why a cluster stays one, is misconception of identity time, place, form and event - which is why Date/Locate works. The cluster is hanging in a time and space disorientation.

That's what louses a BT up, some sort of misconception of time, space, form and event or beingness. That ties them up and they are hard to untangle and blow.

They can switch all over the place with identity: he thinks he's thetan "A", but he's really thetan "B" mocking up "A", and that will cause a stress - that's probably the anatomy of stress.

From earlier research I found it takes two viewpoints to make a somatic. You don't get a somatic on a primary concept - it has to be a secondary concept. That's why objectives work, it gets the guy back to the primary viewpoint/primary concept, and the somatic blows. Something is formed originally, then taking another viewpoint of it, it gets more solid. You do objectives and the guy comes around to the original viewpoint and the somatic as-is-es. This is from earlier research and is expressed in terms of different viewpoints, rather than different beings or different BTs.

You can have a BT thinking he's two beings. There's an implant on the track that did this ("All is one." "One is all.") A BT can think he's a cluster or can think he's several BTs. A cluster can think it's an individual. All you have to do is weed the misconception out of it and it goes - BONGO! With misconceptions of identity, time, place, form and event you get ridges because you can't occupy the correct viewpoint to blow it. And when you do straighten out the misconception it blows. Obviously if it wasn't a misconception it would blow.

This is why wrong dates and wrong locates hang up, and why getting correct date, correct location, blows them.

If you get several misconceptions it gets really tangled up. One we handled had more than one cluster, the earlier cluster thought it was the later cluster, and the later cluster thought it was the earlier cluster. The earlier cluster was from C.C. Implant around I Quad in the universe before this one (which is now in the Dark Horse nebula in Orion) so they thought their universe (location) had disappeared, they were lost in time and place. On top of that was some Power Processing and a wrong item from an out-list. It was pretty tangled up. But they untangle on straightening out the misconceptions, and blow.

"Only the truth will set you free", but you have to know what is the truth of identity, time, place, form and event.
